All the steamers and sail vessels, up and down the river and lake, pass this place, and when the grand trunk railroad is completed, it will be as convenient a point as can be found to connect with the same. North route. The northern route commences on the line, run from Saratoga in the valley of the Kayaderosseras, opposite to or west of Greenfield Center, whence it takes a northerly course, passing about one-fourth of a mile east of South Corinth, and half a mile west of Jessup s landing in Corinth; hence it follows the general direction 6f the Hudson rivet valley) keeping on the southwest bank, through the towns of Hadley, Stony creek, Thurman and Johnsburgh, having crossed the Sacondaga river near its mouth, at the bridge crossing of the plank road, by a grade 70 feet above the bed of the stream, requiring a truss bridge of two spans of 160 feet each. Also the Stony creek, Patterson brook, Stony brook, Mill creek and North Creek, are crossed near their junction with the waters of the Hudson, requiring bridges of short span varying from 30 to 100 feet. At Johnsburgh, about one mile easterly from Jones Ordway s, the Hudson is crossed with a grade of twenty feet, which will require one pier with two spans of truss bridging of 150 feet, whence, the route is kept up on the northerly side for two miles, recrossing...
