Excerpt: .against each other, amidst the reciprocities, the fair exchanges, and the civilizing intercourse which a true commerce and trade engender among nations. He has no objection to gold and silver coin being also a legal tender, as well as paper. It is so in France. The objection that it will set up three standards for the payment of debts, and the injustice to the creditor by the fluctuations in value of either standard, is more than met by the fact that gold and silver, as the present money of the world, do not fluctuate much, except as the currents of the world s commerce ebb and flow; and this cannot be controlled by Government, but must be guarded against by a domestic paper currency, from leaving us with too little money at any time to do business with; while the paper can be made of stable value by proper Government regulation and the interconvertible bond. Making gold and silver coin a legal tender will tend to enhance their value among us, encourage the production of gold and silver, in which the country is very rich, and equalize our exchanges with foreign nations more, by furnishing them what they now desire the most, in exchange for their commodities. Justice and equal rights is Mr. Cooper s motto in the public administration of Government;--no monopolies, and no special or class legislation. All laws should be general laws. So far from giving occasion and instruments to the...
