Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Excerpt from Christmas Vs: Fourth of July Twas in nineteen hundred and ninety-nine A mother went with her little son To the children s fine old Safety Park, In the rock-bound town of Antedun. O, mother, why were the walls built so high? Was the boy s Pythagorean quiz. Did they dream that the babes would tumble out? Jehu! gee-hee! gee-ho and gee-whizz! No, no! my son, but they surely feared That the grown-ups would come tumbling in. Twas the age of mad doings and dreams - Of Insane Fourths and devilish din. Insane Fourth! O, mother what did they do To make it insane? - our nation s day - With its music and candies and creams What could they do; tell me quick, I pray! Come here, my son, read the lesson in stone On the pillars and arch of the gate. Two gods stand there each side of the throne Where The Innocents frolic and wait. Oh, mother dear! what a terrible fiend God Moloch was; and, O, what a sight To just see him fling his victims in; Yet he maimed them not, he killed outright. While the god of greed - the treacherous brute Who professes to be a good god Puts into the little outstretched hands The deadly pistol and dynamite rod! O, mother, how Lucifer must have smiled When he called them angels and elves! When he swore he never would hurt a child Then sold children things to hurt themselves!
